The Revision Courts.

THE REVISION COURTS, which are now sitting for the revision of the Parliamentary registers of electors, seem again this year—as last year—to be confronted with attempts to extend the lodger franchise. Many of these attempts are, at any rate in the first instance, successful. Last week, at Central Hackney (see Times, September 10th), two barmen employed at a public-house claimed to be placed on the register as "lodgers," on the ground that they each occupied a bedroom which was reckoned against them by their employer as equivalent to 5s. a week. The claims were allowed by the revising barrister. It was pointed out that, where the "living-in" system prevails among shop hands, this might mean an enormous increase of the lodger vote.

The Sequel to the Weir Hospital Case.

IN OUR ISSUE of June 18th last (ante, p. 596), writing on "Officialism in Excelsis," we made some observations on the extraordinary action of the Charity Commissioners in directing the payment of £5,000 out of the funds of the Weir Charity to the Bolingbroke Hospital, and we concluded by quoting the answer of the Solicitor-General in the House of Commons on the subject of the possibility of recovering the sum so misapplied. It was foreshadowed by the Solicitor-General that, "in the event of the sum not being recovered," proceedings would be taken by the Attorney-General to recover it. The interesting question whether the Charity Commissioners could, under the circumstances, be made liable in any way, will not, however, have to be decided on the present occasion. It appears from a paragraph in the daily press—see the Times of September 12th—that the governors of the Bolingbroke Hospital have resolved, "acting on the opinion of Sir R. B. FINLAY," to repay the sum of £5,000 handed over to them by the direction of the Charity Commissioners from the Weir Charity funds. The governors of the hospital make a rather pathetic appeal for public help, and it appears that they will have, in order to repay the Weir Trustees, "to exhaust the funds which they have with difficulty collected for the further extension of the hospital." So much for the ill-judged generosity of the Charity Commissioners!

Constructive Notice of Debenture.

IT IS not unusual, on the issue of debentures, to provide that, although they are a floating security, the company shall not be at liberty to create any charge ranking in front of them, but it appears from the recent decision of EVE, J., in Wilson v. Kelland (1910, 2 Ch. 360) that notice of the existence of the debentures arising by virtue of their registration under section 14 of the Companies Act, 1900—now section 93 of the Companies Consolidation Act, 1908—is not also notice of their contents, so as to affect a person dealing with the company with notice of this restriction on its power to deal with its assets. The decision is in accordance with that of KEKEWICH, J., in Re Standard Rotary Machine Co. (Limited) (51 SOLICITORS' JOURNAL, 48), where also debentures had been registered under the Act of 1900, and it follows the principle of the earlier cases of English and Scottish Investment Co. v. Brunton (1892, 2 Q. B. 700) and Re Valletort Steam Laundry Co. (1903, 2 Ch. 654). In these last two cases it was decided that notice of the existence of debentures was not necessarily notice of their contents, and a charge created by deposit of title deeds had priority of the debentures. A debenture does not necessarily restrict the right of a company to mortgage its property, and a person dealing with the company, when he discovers that there is a floating security on its assets, is entitled to assume that the company is free to deal with them. And registration of the debentures under the Companies Acts has no further effect by way of notice than actual notice of the existence of debentures had before registration became necessary. In the present case of Wilson v. Kelland property had been sold to a company which had issued debentures, part of the purchase-money remaining on legal mortgage. The debenture trust deed prohibited the creation of charges ranking before the debentures. Under the circumstances it would seem that the vendors' lien was paramount to any charge on the property arising under the debentures, and EVE, J., so held. The company acquires the property subject to the lien, and the debenture charge attaches upon it subject also to the lien. But apart from this, the learned judge was of opinion that the registration of the debentures did not affect the vendors with constructive notice of the restriction on the company's power to create mortgages, and since they thus had the legal estate without notice, they were for this reason also entitled to priority over the debentures.

The Lien of an Unpaid Vendor of Goods.

THE DECISION of PICKFORD, J., in Mordaunt Brothers v. British Oil and Cake Mills (Limited) (1910, 2 K. B. 502) places an important qualification upon section 47 of the Sale of Goods Act, 1893. That section provides that the unpaid seller's right of lien or stoppage in transitu "is not affected by any sale or other disposition of the goods which the buyer may have made, unless the seller has assented thereto." In applying the exception involved in the concluding words, everything depends on what is meant by the seller's assent to the sub-sale. The assent may be carried so far as to constitute the unpaid vendor the agent or bailee of the sub-purchaser, and then, apart from the statute, the lien would be abandoned. This was so in Stovell v. Hughes (14 East, 308), where the vendor of timber assented to a delivery order to a sub-purchaser, and allowed him to mark the timber. And in Pearson v. Dawson (E. B. & E. 448) it was held that, where the vendor accepted a delivery order in favour of a sub-vendee of goods lying at his warehouse, he became the agent of the sub-vendee, and could not set up a lien. But these were cases of ascertained goods, and PICKFORD, J., has held that such acts as the acceptance by the vendor of a delivery order and the entry of the name of a sub-purchaser in his books may have a different effect according as the goods are specific or are unascertained. In the former case it will be readily inferred that the vendor has assumed the position of bailee for the sub-purchaser. But this is not the case where the goods are unascertained, and then some other test has to be applied. "The assent," said PICKFORD, J., "which affects the unpaid seller's right of lien must be such an assent as in the circumstances shews that the seller intends to renounce his rights against the goods." In the present case oil was purchased by brokers from the defendants, and was resold in different quantities to various sub-buyers, including the plaintiffs. The brokers gave delivery orders to the plaintiffs, and these, on being forwarded to the defendants, were acknowledged by them, and the names of the plaintiffs entered in their books, as the persons to whom delivery was to be made. This seems to have gone far towards constituting such an assent as is mentioned in the statute, but PICKFORD, J., held that it did not go far enough. It was, in his opinion, no more than an assent to the sub-contract subject to the paramount right of lien, and that lien was preserved.

Law—Municipal and International.

A NUMBER of Canadian appeals have recently been heard by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, many of them of merely local interest. There is, however, one case, reported in the Times of July 30th, which is of very wide interest and exceptional importance, Dominion of Canada v. Province of Ontario. The reason of the interest and importance of this case is that the judgment delivered by the Lord Chancellor strikes a note that has recently been sounded very clearly both in England and America with respect to the functions and tendencies of international law as compared with municipal law. The question in dispute between the Dominion and the Province of Ontario was whether the Dominion of Canada was entitled to recover from Ontario a proportion of annuities and other moneys which the Dominion had bound itself in the name of the Crown to pay to an Indian tribe under a treaty of 1873. The treaty made with the Indians had the effect of extinguishing the interest of the Indian tribe in a large tract of country, which eventually turned out to be within the boundaries of the Province of Ontario, though this was not known at the time. Ontario thus derived considerable benefit from this treaty, and the Dominion Government claimed that Ontario should accordingly recoup Canada as a whole a proper part of the expense incurred in freeing this large tract of territory from the Indian interest. The Canadian courts differed inter se, and the Supreme Court of Canada had decided (by a majority of three to two) against the claim of the Dominion Government. On appeal this view was upheld by the Judicial Committee, and the appeal was dismissed. The Lord Chancellor, in delivering the judgment of the board, said that the appellants "must bring their claim within some recognized legal principle" in order to succeed; the Canadian courts could not determine the controversy according to their "own view of what in the circumstances might be thought fair." The same principle of decision was expressed further on in these words: "It may be that, as a matter of fair play between the two governments—as to which their lordships are not called upon to express and do express no opinion—the Province ought to be liable for some part of this outlay. But in point of law, which alone is here in question, the judgment of the Supreme Court appears unexceptionable." The Dominion did endeavour to bring their claim within recognized legal principles by asserting that their relations with the Province resembled various relations well recognized in municipal law as creating rights and liabilities. They invoked the law of agency, of trustee and cestui que trust, of a purchaser of realty paying off an incumbrance, &c. None of these analogies, however, were considered to cover the actual facts, and the appellants failed in their appeal because they could not bring their claim "within some recognized legal principle." Now it is just because judicial decisions based on recognized principles are considered much more satisfactory than when based on what may at the moment seem fair to the tribunal that has to decide the case, that many English lawyers object to an international Prize Court of Appeal. Any such court must necessarily decide many questions simply by its own notions of justice without regard to fixed legal principles.

The Atlantic Fisheries Arbitration.

THE TEXT of the actual findings in the award delivered last week by the Arbitration Tribunal in the Atlantic Fisheries Arbitration is published in the Times of September 8th. The full text of the whole award, that is, including the reasonings on which each finding is based, seems not yet to be generally available. The complete award is stated to be a document of 17,000 words (about eleven pages of this journal as this column is printed), the reading of which took nearly two hours. The dissatisfaction of both parties with an award has often been said to be a sure sign that the award is fair. An equally sure sign of fairness is undoubtedly the satisfaction of both parties. Notwithstanding that the President doubted whether both parties to the present arbitration would be equally satisfied with the result, yet, strangely enough, this is just what seems to have happened. The whole award is, in fact, a compromise in the best sense of the word. Each side has, with respect to some points, made extreme claims, and these have been modified. With respect to other points another. T

other points, a gain on one is counterbalanced by a loss on another. The two most important questions of the seven submitted for decision are the first and fifth, No. 1 relating to the power of making regulations, and No. 5 to "bays." Question No. 1 is, shortly, whether regulations (which includes ordinary legislation) made by Great Britain, Newfoundland, or Canada, with regard to the fisheries must be subject to the consent of the United States? The answer to this question is very lengthy, but the pith of the tribunal's decision is contained in the first two paragraphs, which run as follows: "The right of Great Britain to make regulations without the consent of the United States, as to the exercise of the liberty to take fish referred to in article 1 of the Treaty of the 20th of October, 1818, in the form of municipal laws, ordinances, or rules of Great Britain, Canada, or Newfoundland is inherent to the sovereignty of Great Britain. The exercise of that right by Great Britain is, however, limited by the said treaty in respect of the said liberties therein granted to the inhabitants of the United States, in that such regulations must be made bonâ fide, and must not be in violation of the said treaty." This decision absolutely gives the go-by to the theory of international servitudes so much insisted on in argument by the United States, involving a partition of Great Britain's sovereignty. The tribunal must be credited with very considerable tact and legal ingenuity in keeping clear of any theory of international rights that would be so offensive to national susceptibilities as to involve even a nominal diminution of rights of territorial sovereignty. At the same time it seems clear that the United States has substantially gained all that she would have gained under any theory of international servitudes, for the regulations to be made by the power in whose hands the complete sovereignty remains "must be made bonâ fide, and must not be in violation of the said treaty." The reasonableness of certain legislative and executive acts of Newfoundland is to be decided by a specially appointed commission of experts. The reasonableness of future regulations is (if complained of by the United States) to be decided by Permanent Mixed Fishery Commissions, one for Canada and the other for Newfoundland. As already stated, question No. 5 is decided in such a way as not to call for much remark from lawyers. The tribunal lay down that, in the present case, the usual line across the headlands of a bay is only to be drawn where the bay narrows to a width of ten miles. In addition to this, as regards certain named bays, definite points are fixed to and from which lines are to be drawn. The substantial result is that the territorial rights of Newfoundland and Canada are restricted (as regards bays) to bays not exceeding ten miles wide.

Assignability of Contract.

THE QUESTION whether a contract is a "personal" one—i.e., one requiring a certain amount of skill, knowledge, or supervision, or is of such a description that it may be assigned, and the trustee or creditors of the contracting party are entitled to take it up—is always one of difficulty, and does not appear to have been exhaustively considered by the English courts. The Scottish courts have often had to consider such questions, and in the case of Cole v. Handasyde, heard and determined by the Court of Session some little time ago, the judgments may be read with profit by those who are conversant with mercantile law. The facts were that a firm of oil merchants sold to manufacturers a quantity of black grease, a by-product in the process of manufacturing cotton oil. The contract note provided, inter alia, that the grease was to be of usual good merchantable quality. The "terms" stated on the note were as follows: "The goods to be sampled by an independent sampler prior to shipment. Analysis to be made by Dr. W. GRAY, of Liverpool, whose decision shall be final." In acknowledging receipt of the contract note, the buyers added: "Please note, however, that all the grease is to be soft and seedy as sample in our possession." The sellers having afterwards entered into an arrangement for the benefit of their creditors, the trustee proposed to fulfil the contract, and called on the buyers to accept delivery, which they declined to do, on the ground that the contract was unassignable. In an action for damages at the instance of the trustee, they alleged that the sellers were skilled in the trade, whereas the plaintiff was not, and that the action was not maintainable. They argued, in support of this proposition, that the contract involved delectus personæ, for its fulfilment depended on the proper selection of a peculiar kind of grease. The Court of Session, in holding that the contract was assignable, say that, in considering whether there is or is not the element of delectus personæ in a contract, three stages are to be taken. The highest and easiest example of a contract in which there is delectus personæ is where the contract is one for a personal service of a peculiar nature, as in a contract to paint a picture or write a book. Next, there is a class where the delectus personæ is not so clear—the case of manufactured articles. It may quite well be that an article is of such a character and quality, and the reputation of the manufacturer such, that a contract for an article to be supplied by some individual may imply that it is to be made by him. For instance, a contract for a gun from PURDIE would not be fulfilled by supplying a gun bought in the ordinary market in Birmingham. The case under consideration is where the person does not himself manufacture, or contract for, goods of a certain description which is specified in the contract and nothing more. In the latter case, the element of delectus personæ is gone. The contract is for the purchase of a certain commodity, and although it may be that the seller was specially skilled to judge of the qualities of the commodity in question, the contract referred nothing to his skill or experience. The stipulation as to the sample excluded the idea of reliance on the special skill of the sellers. The case does not appear to us to be one of any difficulty, but the law by which it is governed is neatly and clearly stated in the judgment.

Appeals from Revision Courts.

IT IS occasionally observed that no appeal from a revising barrister ever reaches the House of Lords. The simple reason is that, by section 14 of the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1881, the decision of the Court of Appeal on any such case is "final and conclusive," and no further appeal is possible with or without leave of any court. The decision of the Divisional Court is also "final and conclusive" unless special leave is given to appeal to the Court of Appeal. The effect of section 14 is to completely bar the litigant from access to the highest Appeal Court—the House of Lords. It is somewhat singular and anomalous that a similar provision in a statute enacted by an overseas Legislature might not thus completely bar a claim from being carried to the highest Appeal Court—the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. This was finally determined in an appeal from New Zealand, where the Judicial Committee held that the words "final and conclusive" did not of themselves exclude the prerogative of the Crown to grant special leave to appeal to the King in Council: see In the Will of Wi Matua (Deceased) (1908, A. C. 448). It would thus be possible for those members of the Judicial Committee who are also members of the House of Lords to decide, on an appeal from an overseas dominion where English conditions prevailed, in a sense directly contrary to an existing decision of the Court of Appeal relating to claims for electoral registration, without the possibility of having the latter tested by formal appeal to the House of Lords.

Amendment of the Children Act.

IN REVIEWING a recent text-book in June last (ante, p. 615) we noticed the case of Rex v. Moon (1910, 1 K. B. 818), where the Court of Criminal Appeal had to construe the word "seduction" in section 17 of the Children Act, 1908. A father, whose daughter had already been seduced, had encouraged subsequent illicit intercourse between the girl and her seducer. The father was convicted under section 17 of encouraging "the seduction or prostitution" of the girl. On appeal, however, this conviction was quashed, on the ground that "seduction" meant inducing a girl to part with her virtue for the first time, and did not cover what is usually expressed in criminal statutes by the term "carnal knowledge." This was contrary to the view of the judge who tried the case, and what must be regarded as a hole in the section has now been remedied by the passing of the Children Act (1908) Amendment Act, 1910, which directs section 17 of the Act of 1908 to be read as if the words "carnal knowledge" were inserted, thus abrogating the decision in Rex v. Moon.

Priorities of Charges on Insurance Policy.

THE decision of PARKER, J., in Re Weniger's Policy (1910, 2 Ch. 291) deals with some interesting questions as to the priority of charges on a policy of insurance, and it illustrates also the law as to the priority of assignments of choses in action generally. In 1892 WENIGER took out a policy for £750, with additions, with the Royal Insurance Co., payment to be made on the 20th of November, 1909, or his earlier death. On this policy a series of charges were created, ranking in order of date as follows:—In 1897, 1899, and 1902 to the insurance company by deposit of the policy, with an accompanying memorandum, and further charges, for an aggregate sum of £250 and interest; in July, 1905, to KAPP, for £147; in September, 1905, to the Metropolitan Credit Co., for £115; in November, 1905, to the Indo European Telegraph Co., for £600; in April, 1906, to KAPP, for a further £73; on the 9th of May, 1906, to COHEN, for £250; and on the 25th of May, 1900, to RAMSAY, for an amount not stated. The advance of £600 by the telegraph company included £250 and interest paid to the insurance company, the policy and original memorandum being handed to the telegraph company, and in 1907 and 1908 the telegraph company paid premiums on the policy amounting to £116. WENIGER was alive on the 20th of November, 1909, and the insurance company, having then no charge on the policy, paid into court the moneys due under it amounting to £780. Thereupon the priority of the various incumbrancers had to be determined.

Prima facie, of course, charges upon a chose in action rank in order of date, but, upon a well-recognized principle, an incumbrancer who gives notice to the holder of the fund thereby gains priority over an earlier incumbrancer who has omitted to give notice, provided that at the date when he gives the notice he has himself no notice, actual or constructive, of the earlier incumbrance. Hence, in ascertaining priorities in a case of this kind, the order of the dates of notice of the charges is still more important than the order of the charges themselves. No notice of the six charges above mentioned (excluding that of the insurance company itself) was given to the insurance company till 1906, and then—in August and September—notice was given in the following order: Metropolitan Credit Co., RAMSAY, KAPP (in respect of both his charges), COHEN, and the telegraph company. This order, then, was the order of priority of the incumbrances—apart from the original £250, taken over by the telegraph company, and the payment of premiums—subject to the question whether any of the incumbrancers failed to gain priority by notice by reason of their having themselves notice of earlier incumbrances; for, as just stated, notice to the holder of the fund only gives priority in the absence of notice of the earlier incumbrance: Re A. D. Holmes (29 Ch. D. 786). Where the subsequent incumbrancer has such notice, he is not prejudiced by the fund being left under the apparent control of the mortgagor, and he has no equity to be preferred to the earlier incumbrancer, notwithstanding that such earlier incumbrancer has failed to give notice to the holder of the fund. The effect of such notice would be that the subsequent incumbrancer would be able, by inquiry, to ascertain the existence of the first incumbrance. But where he already knows of its existence, he requires no such protection. Moreover, in the case of a policy of insurance, the ordinary rule as to omission to inquire for title deeds applies, and where the policy has been deposited by way of charge, a subsequent incumbrancer who omits to inquire for the policy is fixed with constructive notice of the prior charge: Spencer v. Clarke (9 Ch. D. 137).

The last-mentioned rule was important in the present case, since KAPP, in respect of his second charge, COHEN, and RAMSAY all took their charges after the policy had been handed to the telegraph company as security for its advance of £600, and by omitting to inquire for the policy they had constructive notice of the telegraph company's charge. Hence, although they gave notice to the insurance company before the telegraph company, they could not obtain priority over it. Moreover, the telegraph company, in taking over the original charge of £250, obtained priority for that charge over all others, and they obtained the like priority for the payment of premiums, which was an expense proper for them to incur as mortgagees. Thus the telegraph company came first in respect of the £250 and the premiums, and then the Metropolitan Credit Co. by virtue of their being the first to give notice to the insurance company. The next incumbrancers in order of notice were RAMSAY, KAPP (two charges), COHEN, and the telegraph company; but, as just stated, RAMSAY, KAPP (second charge), and COHEN gained no priority over the telegraph company since they had constructive notice of the telegraph company's charge. Allowing for this, the order becomes KAPP (first charge), telegraph company, RAMSAY, KAPP (second charge), and COHEN. But this is not final, for, as PARKER, J., noticed, it does not allow to RAMSAY the priority which he had got over KAPP by his earlier notice to the insurance company, and the learned judge ingeniously gave him the benefit of this by putting him in the place of KAPP's first charge. This gave due effect to the order of notice as between KAPP and RAMSAY without disturbing the position of the telegraph company. Thus the amount of KAPP's first charge retained its place in the order of incumbrances—namely, third—but it was payable, not to KAPP, but to RAMSAY so far as necessary to satisfy his charge (apparently this was for a smaller amount) and only the balance went to KAPP. Then came the telegraph company in respect of the surplus of their advance over the £250 and premiums; and after this KAPP took the amount paid to RAMSAY and also his second charge, while COHEN came last. From a comparison of the amount of the fund and of the various charges it is obvious that there was not enough to satisfy all the claimants, but the manner in which the priorities were worked out offers a very neat solution of the problem before the court—a problem which does not seem to have arisen in quite such an intricate shape before.

It should be added that the telegraph company sought to tack its further advance to the original £250, on the ground that the incumbrancers subsequent to the £250 had not given notice to them or their predecessors, the insurance company, of their advances. But this claim failed, since, as the learned judge held, a later mortgagee of a chose in action is under no obligation to give notice to a prior mortgagee. He sufficiently protects himself by giving notice to the holder of the fund. The learned judge suggested that the case might be different where the original agreement for a loan provides for further advances, and that, in such a case, the mortgagee can claim for the further advances the same priority as for his original advance, unless a subsequent incumbrancer has given him direct notice: see Calisher v. Forbes (L. R. 7 Ch. 109). But it would be unwise for a mortgagee to act on this suggestion, and, even if the mortgage provides for further advances, these should not be made without fresh inquiry as to notices received by the holder of the fund.

Magisterial Procedure.

OK'S MAGISTERIAL FORMULIST: BEING A COLLECTION OF FORMS AND PRECEDENTS FOR PRACTICAL USE IN ALL CASES OUT OF QUARTER SESSIONS, AND IN PAROCHIAL MATTERS, BY MAGISTRATES, THEIR CLERKS, SOLICITORS, AND CONSTABLES. NINTH EDITION. By PERCY THOMAS BAKER, M.A. (Oxon.), Solicitor. WITH A SECTION ON INDICTABLE OFFENCES. By H. A. READ, First Clerk of Arraigns, Central Criminal Court. Butterworth & Co.

The last edition of this useful book of precedents in procedure before magistrates was published in 1901. Since that time numerous statutes affecting such procedure have been passed, including the Motor-car Act, 1903, the Aliens Act, 1905, the Probation of Offenders Act, 1907, the Children Act, 1908, and the Prevention of Crime Act, 1908, and the present edition has been revised so as to incorporate, so far as necessary, this new legislation. Part I. deals with summary convictions and orders, and Part II. with indictable offences; and each part is divided into two chapters, giving general forms or outlines, and special forms applicable to various offences. Part III. deals with other proceedings out of sessions, dividing these according as they relate to matters to be done in special sessions, or to matters to be done in petty sessions or by one justice. represents a great variety of subjects, and the work is invaluable for magistrates and those who are responsible for the proper carrying on of magisterial work. The importance of the Children Act, 1908, is recognized in the numerous forms, occupying some sixteen pages, allotted to offences under it. The Public Meetings Act, 1908, and the Cinematograph Act, 1909, are not omitted, and sixteen forms are given for offences relating to motor-cars. A section is still allotted to the volunteer force, and is justified on the ground that the Volunteer Acts are not repealed by the Territorial and Revenue Forces Act, 1907. This may be so, but we thought the volunteers were as extinct as the dodo. The edges of the volume are conveniently coloured and lettered so as to enable it to be readily opened at the subject required, and it constitutes a very complete guide to magisterial procedure.

Libel and Joint Tortfeasors.

[To the Editor of the Solicitors' Journal and Weekly Reporter.]

Sir,—On page 782 of the SOLICITORS' JOURNAL you have an article on "Libel and Joint Tortfeasors." You seem to have overlooked the case of Smith & Son v. Clinton and Another (25 T. L. R. 34), and a perusal of this case will shew that the first paragraph of your article is incorrect. S. S. FORSYTH.

Bailey-lane, Coventry, Sept. 13.

[Our correspondent is under a misapprehension as to the scope of the article he refers to. The case of Smith v. Clinton (which is also reported in 99 L. T. 840) was decided by Coleridge, J., with express reference to the facts of the case. The libel was not inserted by the plaintiffs (the printers) through accident or inadvertence, but with full knowledge of its contents and character. This is a very different thing from even mere carelessness on the part of a printer, and totally distinct from cases of absolute ignorance of the libellous character of a paragraph. Our article dealt only with cases where the element of actual wrongdoing is absent.—ED. S.J.]

General.

Last year the fees received from suitors in the City of London Court, says the Times, amounted to £20,980. The expenditure on the court was £17,904. Of this £13,650 was expended in salaries. At the Mayor's Court the fees amounted to £6,845, and the expenses to £3,827. Of the latter, salaries were £6,016. The expenses of the administration of criminal justice at the Central Criminal Court amounted to £11,767, of which £5,810 went in salaries, including £3,000 to the Recorder and £2,500 to the Common Serjeant.

In the course of the trial of an indictment for libel at the Central Criminal Court on Tuesday the Recorder said he thought the criminal law was very much abused in libel cases. To drag men to police courts and to the Old Bailey was in itself a very serious matter. The judges in the High Court were ready to try libel cases; and he had not been able to discover why they should have libel cases constantly in that court blocking the business. The custom of instituting criminal prosecutions for libel was much too prevalent.

One of the five Chinese lawyers now in London investigating our legal and criminal methods is reported by the Daily Express to have said: "We were greatly impressed by your police court at Bow-street. Here we were struck particularly by the advocates and the swift and calm deliberation with which the magistrate decided the cases before him. Your advocates interested us immensely. Up to the present we have had nothing of this sort in China, but the system is to be introduced into our courts next year. I think it a great advantage that any one on trial should have the benefit of one who has a knowledge of the law and is able to plead in court."

The free coupon, receivable in part payment, has, says the American journal Case and Comment, been adopted by an enterprising lawyer in the south-west, who has issued the following circular:—"—'s Law Offices, — Street, Up First Stairway South of — Dry Goods Store. 'Phone No. —. Announcement.—The Law Partnership of C. & O. has been dissolved. Mr. C. retiring. Mr. O. will continue the business at the above address, first stairway south of the — Dry Goods Store. He will do a general Law Practice. Save the $2.50 Coupon attached hereto, as it will be valuable should you want some Law work done. Notary Public in Office.—$2.50.—This Coupon entitles the holder to a credit of $2.50 on fee for any Legal Service when presented at office. No person can present more than one coupon. No charge for advice."

In the Supreme Court of Brooklyn, says the Central Law Journal, a woman was trying to convince Justice Marean that she ought to have a separation from her husband, John, because he was a drunkard, and sometimes drank as much as a pint of whisky before breakfast. Justice Marean looked searchingly at a florid, full-faced man sitting at the right of the defendant's counsel. Having completed the scrutiny, he turned to the lawyer and said sharply: "It seems reasonable. It looks as though he was capable of it." The lawyer's face broke into a grin. "That isn't my client," he said. "He isn't in court. We understood that this case would be tried in the afternoon." "I hope your Honour is not referring to me," said the man who had been taken for a horrible example and who is a member of the bar. Explanations were lost in a burst of laughter, in which the justice and the victim of mistaken identity joined.

Referring to the proposed investiture at Carnarvon Castle of the Prince of Wales, the Times says that there is no modern record of the investiture of a Prince of Wales. The letters patent, dated December 8, 1841, by which Queen Victoria created her eldest son Prince of Wales and Earl of Chester, expressly use the word "invest": "We do ennoble and invest him with the said principality and earldom, by giving him with a sword, by putting a coronet on his head, and a gold ring on his finger, and also by delivering a gold rod into his hand, that he may preside there, and may direct and defend those parts to hold to him and his heirs Kings of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland for ever." Edward the Black Prince was created Prince of Wales in a Parliament held at Westminster on May 12, 1343, his father, Edward III., investing him with a circlet, gold ring, and silver rod.

R.
